ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am grateful for the support of many people who have contributed to this dissertation in one way or another. My special gratitude goes to:

My supervisors, Bart Bossink and Ard-Pieter de Man, for entrusting me with this project, their insightful and sharp feedback, for presenting me to their professional network, for answering my endless questions and concerns over and over again, for positive vibe and enthusiasm throughout. You have been a fantastic team.

The reading committee, Jacqueline Broerse, Han Gerrits, Aard Groen, Peter van der Sijde, and Wim Vanhaverbeke, for dedicating their precious time to read my work and offering valuable feedback.

Herman and Patrick whose expertise, friendliness, and openness played a vital role in accomplishing this dissertation.

Several kind persons who have helped immensely during the process of data collection: The team of the Institute of Sustainable Process Technology (ISPT), especially Frans van den Akker and Tjeerd Jongsma, the Dutch Product Development and Management Association (PDMA), especially Jeroen de Kempenaer and Jurjen Helmus, and many people who have provided access to their professional networks, especially Peter van Hoorn, Marie-Pauline van Voorst, and Gert Staal. My special thanks goes to all R&D professionals who shared their experiences with me by answering the survey, being my interview partners, or in numerous informal conversations during walks, lunches, coffee breaks, and train rides.

My (former) students Anouk and Joram for helping me transcribe interviews, Peter Dekker for his expertise in statistical analysis, James Morrison for polishing my English, and Hannes Nordiek for the cover page.

My lovely PhD colleagues who have helped me get through this process with practical advice, humor, and inspiring conversations. Caro, Juan, Yuval, and Robbert for their comforting presence, encouragement and distraction. Roel, Chen, Evgenia, Delia, and Julian for making my days at the VU so much more enjoyable.

Nancy Matsunaga and my Writers Studio companions, especially Jen, Mel, Sueli, Just, Daniel, Mirja, and Sarah, for their continuous and illuminating feedback on my fiction writing that in many different ways also fed into accomplishing this dissertation.

Linn Kolbe
April 2015
ABRI DISSERTATION SERIES

7. Polat, T. (2015); Active aging in work: motivating employees to continue working after retirement.
8. Ossenkop, C. (2015); What you see is what you get!? Looking into ethnic diversity and professional careers in Dutch organizations.