Table of Contents

Acknowledgements ........................................................................................................ i
List of Abbreviations ..................................................................................................... ii
Executive Summary ....................................................................................................... iii

Chapter 1: Introduction .............................................................................................. 1
  1.1. Background ............................................................................................................ 1
  1.2. Research Aims and Objectives ............................................................................. 5
  1.3. Research Questions .............................................................................................. 5
  1.4. Theoretical Framework ....................................................................................... 6
  1.5. Research Design .................................................................................................. 19
  1.6. Summary of Research Findings ......................................................................... 26
  1.7. Research Outputs ............................................................................................... 28
  1.8. Setting within the Cambodian Research Program ............................................. 30
  1.9. Organization of the Dissertation ........................................................................ 30

Chapter 2: Cambodia–China Relations: A Positive-Sum Game? ......................... 32
  2.1. Introduction ........................................................................................................... 32
  2.2. The Extent of China’s Involvement in Cambodia ................................................. 34
  2.3. China’s Interests in Cambodia ............................................................................. 43
  2.4. Discussion ........................................................................................................... 52

Chapter 3: China’s Roles in Cambodia’s Energy Sector: Catalyst or Antagonist for Development? ................................................................. 57
  3.1. Introduction ........................................................................................................... 57
  3.2. Conceptual Framework: Energy and Sustainable Development ..................... 60
  3.3. Cambodia’s Energy: Institutional Arrangement and Policies ............................ 64
  3.4. China’s Engagement in Cambodia’s Energy Sector ........................................... 71
  3.5. Discussion ........................................................................................................... 75
  3.6. Conclusion ........................................................................................................... 79

Chapter 4: Hydropower and Local Community: A Case Study of Kamchay Dam, A China-Funded Hydropower Project in Cambodia .................................................. 80
  4.1. Introduction ........................................................................................................... 80
  4.2. Hydropower Development in Cambodia ............................................................... 82
  4.3. Conceptual Framework: Hydropower and Sustainable Development .......... 83
  4.4. Case Study: Kamchay Dam ............................................................................... 90
ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

First and foremost, I would like to express my sincere appreciation to my advisor Professor Dr. Heidi Dahles, who has encouraged and supported me since the beginning of this project. Her invaluable guidance and advice has contributed to significantly improve the quality of this dissertation. Her kind words, "Pheakdey, I know you can do it", has always been effective in pushing me to move forward when I got stuck. Without her trust, motivation and constructive comments, this dissertation would not have come into existence. It's a privilege to have worked with her.

I also wish to thank all my key informants, including the local government officials, representatives from development partners, NGOs, the private sector, and especially community members, for allowing me to interview them. Their expertise, experience and local knowledge serve as the very foundation for this research. In particular, I would like to thank the village heads for helping me to conduct the focus group discussion in their respective village. The discussions generated rich data useful for the analysis on the impact of the dam on the livelihood of the local communities.

My deepest gratitude goes to all my family members. Words cannot express how grateful I am to my late grandma, my mum and aunts, for all of the sacrifices that they made on my behalf. Their continuous support and care are the source of inspiration for me to realize my goal.

Last but not least, I thank the Netherlands Organizations for Scientific Research (NWO) for funding this research project. In addition, I would like to extend my thanks to the VU University Amsterdam for facilitating my stay in Amsterdam, and for providing an office space for me to write my dissertation.

Chapter 5: China’s Resource Diplomacy in Cambodia and Beyond:

On Soft Power and Strongmen

5.1. Introduction
5.2. China’s Global Quest for Resources
5.3. Conceptual Framework: Resource Diplomacy
5.4. China’s Resource Diplomacy in Cambodia
5.5. Discussion
5.6. Conclusion

Chapter 6: Conclusion

6.1. Empirical Findings
6.2. Theoretical Implications
6.3. Policy Implications
6.4. Limitations and Suggestions for Further Research

Bibliography

Annexes