

VU Research Portal

Transnationalism, local development and social security

Kabki, M.J.E.

2007

document version

Publisher's PDF, also known as Version of record

Link to publication in VU Research Portal

citation for published version (APA)

Kabki, M. J. E. (2007). Transnationalism, local development and social security: The functioning of support networks in rural Ghana. African Studies Centre.

General rights

Copyright and moral rights for the publications made accessible in the public portal are retained by the authors and/or other copyright owners and it is a condition of accessing publications that users recognise and abide by the legal requirements associated with these rights.

- Users may download and print one copy of any publication from the public portal for the purpose of private study or research.
- You may not further distribute the material or use it for any profit-making activity or commercial gain
- You may freely distribute the URL identifying the publication in the public portal ?

Take down policy

If you believe that this document breaches copyright please contact us providing details, and we will remove access to the work immediately and investigate your claim.

E-mail address:

vuresearchportal.ub@vu.nl

English summary

Approximately one in ten Ghanaians live abroad. Since many Ghanaians originate from the Ashanti Region, Ashanti rural life is greatly influenced by migrants. This book describes how Ashanti rural dwellers use migrant ties in their social networks to obtain their social security. It uses a transnational approach and contains many real stories from respondents' lives. The findings show that rural people, through their ties with migrants, can be agents of change in the development of their local communities. The book contributes to debates on transnationalism, social security, and migration and development.