Geheugen / Memory

“Ik bedoel ze kunnen naar de maan, ze kunnen computers maken, maar je geheugen, zeg maar een beetje rendabel afstellen, dat er op het juiste moment ook inderdaad de juiste informatie naar boven komt, dat schijnt maar niet te lukken. Dat vind ik zo slordig.

....., weet je wat ik eigenlijk nog het meest storende vind, soms moet je even snel iets weten, weet je wel heb je even snel iets nodig waarvan je zeker weet dat het er in zit, zit er al heel lang in, en dan komt het er niet meer uit.”

[We can travel to the moon, we have built computers, but making our memory work a little more efficiently, so that you can remember the right information at the right time, seems almost impossible. I think that’s shoddy workmanship.

....., you know what I find most annoying, sometimes you need to know something really fast and you know it’s in your memory, that it’s been there for ages, but it just won’t come out.”]

Brigitte Kaandorp in “...en Vliegwerk”, 1996
