CONTENTS

PREFACE 5

CONTENTS 7

1  INTRODUCTION 13

1.1 Work as a central concept for people and scientists 13

1.2 Modernization theory and crowding out thesis, welfare and its downside and motivation for public service 15

1.3 Work centrality 18

1.4 Values attitudes, orientations and fit 19

1.5 Value change, intrinsic value orientation and post-materialism 20

1.6 Two kinds of commitment 21

1.7 International comparative perspective 24

1.8 Data and methodology 27

1.9 The separate chapters 29
    1.9.1 Work centrality and Work values (Chapter 2) 29
    1.9.2 Employment commitment (Chapter 3) 30
    1.9.3 Organizational commitment and the fit of needs-supply values (Chapter 4) 31
    1.9.4 Concluding epilogue 32

2  WORK VALUES DEVELOPMENTS IN TIME 33

2.1 Introduction the role of work in society 33

2.2 Historical Context 34
    2.2.1 In general 34
    2.2.2 PWE Dead and Gone? 35
    2.2.3 Work and values 36

2.3 Theory 37
    2.3.1 Other values needed? 37
    2.3.2 Work centrality and employment commitment 39
    2.3.3 Intrinsic and Extrinsic work values 42
2.3.4 Transition towards a post-industrial society
2.3.5 Personal characteristics and work values
   2.3.5.1 Work place position
   2.3.5.2 Age-lifecycle/cohort

2.4 Sample and data measurement
   2.4.1 In general
   2.4.2 Measures
      2.4.2.1 Work centrality
      2.4.2.2 Intrinsic and extrinsic work values
      2.4.2.3 Post-materialism
      2.4.2.4 Age categorization

2.5 Results
   2.5.1 A more demanding workforce and more intrinsic oriented workforce?
   2.5.2 Work centrality and leisure orientation over time and in the life cycle
   2.5.3 Post-materialism
   2.5.4 Personal characteristics

2.6 Conclusion and discussion
   2.6.1 Conclusion
   2.6.2 Discussion
   2.6.3 Contribution to theory
   2.6.4 Limitations
   2.6.5 Practical implications

3 EMPLOYMENT COMMITMENT, UNEMPLOYMENT AVOIDANCE, PUBLIC SERVICE ORIENTATION AND WORK VALUES

3.1 Introduction: employment commitment and institutions

3.2 Model variables
   3.2.1 The dependent variables
      3.2.1.1 Employment commitment (box 4 of figure 3.1)
      3.2.1.2 Flexibility to avoid unemployment (box 5 of figure 3.1)
   3.2.2 The independent variables
      3.2.2.1 Production regimes (box 1 in figure 3.1)
      3.2.2.2 Work values as explanatory factors (box 2 in figure 3.1)
      3.2.2.3 Personal characteristics as explanatory factors (box 3 in figure 3.1)

3.3 Hypotheses about production regimes and the dependent variables
   3.3.1 Welfare state generosity and employment commitment
4 THE RELATION BETWEEN NEEDS-SUPPLY WORK VALUES, VALUE FIT, PUBLIC SERVICE ORIENTATION, EMPLOYEE COMMITMENT AND TURNOVER INTENTIONS

4.1 Introduction needs supply fit and its consequences

4.2 Theory and Hypotheses

4.2.1 In general

4.2.2 Funnel effect

4.2.2.1 Fischer’s contribution

4.2.2.2 Funnel and gaps in public service

4.2.3 Job satisfaction, commitment and fit

4.2.4 Needs-supply fit and commitment

4.2.5 Mediation of job satisfaction

4.2.6 Needs-Supply fit and turnover intentions

4.2.7 Union membership

4.2.8 Family to work conflict and commitment

4.2.9 Societal fit, commitment and public sector workers

4.3 Data, Methodology and measures

4.3.1 Chosen countries, their workplaces and previous research

4.3.2 Data, Methodology and measures

4.3.2.1 Funnel effect

4.3.2.2 Commitment and needs-supply fit

4.3.2.3 Turnover intentions

4.3.2.4 Other operationalizations

4.4 Results

4.4.1 Overall description

4.4.2 Funnel effect and gaps

4.4.3 Simplified Bruggemann typology and commitment

4.4.4 Fit in all countries

4.4.5 Job satisfaction mediating between fit and commitment.

4.4.6 The effects of fit on turnover intention (hypothesis 4)

4.4.7 Trade-union membership and commitment

4.4.8 Family to work conflict and organizational commitment

4.4.9 Public sector workers and organizational commitment

4.4.10 Toward an overall model with organizational commitment and antecedents

4.5 Discussion and conclusion

4.5.1 In general

4.5.2 Contributions to theory
4.5.3 Limitations 196
4.5.4 Contribution to practice 197

Appendix 4.A Measurement other variables. 198

Appendix 4.B 199

5 CONCLUDING EPILOGUE 209

5.1 Introduction 209

5.2 Summary of main findings and evaluation of conceptual models 209
  5.2.1 Summary of main findings chapter 3 211
  5.2.2 Summary important findings chapter 4 212

5.3 Overarching themes and subjects 214
  5.3.1 Intrinsic extrinsic and societal work values 214
  5.3.2 How important is work to people? (Work centrality and employment commitment) 217
  5.3.3 Institutional surroundings 218

5.4 Feedback on four theories 218

5.5 Methodology (evaluation) 220

5.6 Overall findings and conclusion 221

Samenvatting in het Nederlands (Summary in Dutch) 227

REFERENCES 241