Choice or Consequence? Explaining Differences in Female Participation in Mathematics, Science and Technology in the Netherlands and Sweden
Yazilitas, D.

2017

document version
Publisher's PDF, also known as Version of record

Link to publication in VU Research Portal

citation for published version (APA)

General rights
Copyright and moral rights for the publications made accessible in the public portal are retained by the authors and/or other copyright owners and it is a condition of accessing publications that users recognise and abide by the legal requirements associated with these rights.

• Users may download and print one copy of any publication from the public portal for the purpose of private study or research.
• You may not further distribute the material or use it for any profit-making activity or commercial gain
• You may freely distribute the URL identifying the publication in the public portal

Take down policy
If you believe that this document breaches copyright please contact us providing details, and we will remove access to the work immediately and investigate your claim.

E-mail address:
vuresearchportal.ub@vu.nl

Download date: 16. Aug. 2024
Acknowledgements

A lot of people have contributed to this doctoral thesis, whom I would like to thank here.

First of all, I would like to thank my promotor Sawitri Saharso and copromotor Jörgen Svensson. Without your continuous supervision, encouragement and guidance this thesis would not have existed. You have been there for me during every step of this PhD research project, both on an intellectual and on a personal level. Thank you for believing in me and for deciding to go on this, sometimes unpredictable, adventure with me.

Secondly, I also want to thank Geert de Vries, who has coauthored two of the four articles. Thank you for your valuable comments that have contributed to the articles and for being part of my supervision team.

This thesis would, of course, also not exist without all the schools and pupils that have participated in my research. To you I owe my greatest thanks! Thanks to the pupils for trusting me with their stories and thoughts and with their time. Thanks to the schools for similarly giving me their trust and for facilitating this research project. From a professional point of view, I know this type of trust does not come easily.

I also want to thank the members of my reading committee – Harry Ganzeboom, Els Rommes, Evelien Tonkens, Wiel Veugelers and Monique Volman – for their thoughtful evaluation of my thesis and valuable comments.

Thank you, also, to my many colleagues at the VU with whom I shared many laughs as well as concerns during the last few years. Thanks for your companionship and support. Here I especially want to thank the various ‘roommates’ I had during my time at the VU, including Ali, Doutje, Elske, Jasper, Marjoka and Tamara in the Metropolitan Building, and Jasmijn, Rezvan, Silvia, Suzanne and Zsuzsa, in the Hoofdgebouw.

A special thank you also to my colleagues in Malmö, who have been so good to accept me as one of their own. Thank you, Pieter Bevelander for accepting me as a visiting researcher at the Malmö Institute for Studies of Migration, Diversity and Welfare.
And thank you, also, Brigitte, Elise, Henrik, Ingrid, Ioana, Kate, Merja, Nahikari, Samantha, and Vasna for your kind hospitality and for making me feel at home in Malmö.

The same applies to my colleagues at the Organisation for Economic Co-Operation and Development in Paris. First of all, thank you, Stéphan Vincent-Lancrin, for having me in your team. Paris would also not have been Paris if it had not been for Marc, Martin, Mikko and Oliver. I thank you for our many discussions during lunch and for your company.

Here, I also want to thank my friends at home. You all know how obsessive I can be sometimes. Still you always make time to listen to me when I need to talk and always challenge me to put things in a broader perspective, when I almost forget how to. Thank you for your sincerity and friendship.

Finally, I want to thank my family, and in particular my parents, Mehmet and Feruze Yazilitas, for your boundless love and support. I am here today because of you. This is why this dissertation is dedicated to you. Thank you also to my siblings, Nafile, Firdes, Erdinc and Samir, and your families, for your love and support. This dissertation is also dedicated to you and, of course, to my nieces and nephews, since they represent the future generation.