Acknowledgements

This PhD dissertation would not have been possible without the support of numerous institutions and individuals. First, I am particularly grateful to my two co-supervisors, Prof. Niilo Kauppi and Prof. Ben Crum, for their patience, full support and continuous guidance during the past few years. I consider myself lucky to have been able to benefit from their precious time and useful comments on previous bits and pieces of this dissertation, and I am very grateful for both of them to have accompanied me in the process.

Furthermore, I would like to thank the Gips-Schüle-Stiftung and the Wüstenrot-Stiftung for their joint fellowship program for young scholars of social sciences in the academic year 2014/2015, which enabled me a research stay at the Deutsch-Französisches Institut (DFI) in Ludwigsburg, Baden Württemberg. I especially thank Dr. Stefan Seidendorf and Prof. Frank Baasner of the DFI for their hospitality during this time.

I thank the French-Dutch Research network FRNL (Réseau franco-néerlandais / Nederlands-Frans Netwerk) for the EOLE Mobility fund I obtained in the academic year 2013-2014, as well as the Doctoral School for Law, Political science and History at the University of Strasbourg (ED101) for its international mobility fund in the academic year 2012-2013, which enabled me to travel regularly between the Université de Strasbourg and the Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam. Special thanks are reserved to the Department of political Science and Public Administration at the Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam for the administrative assistance and support during my stays at the VU.

The financial support of the Doctoral School of Social Sciences at the University of Strasbourg (ED519) and the CNRS/University of Strasbourg Laboratory SAGE (Societies, Actors, Governments in Europe) (UMR 7363) I obtained between 2010 and 2016 enabled me to present my on-going research in various academic conferences and workshops across Europe. In addition, this dissertation received support from the Excellence Initiative of the University of Strasbourg, funded by the French Government's Future Investments program.

Finally, I am very grateful to Bart J. Bes for his hospitality in Amsterdam and for his assistance in the most 'number crunching' part of this dissertation, as well as for Avital Grünpeter for the English proof-reading. Last but not least, thanks to many good friends and members of the couch-surfing community across Europe who hosted me during my stays for academic conferences and fieldwork and made my research a truly European adventure.
