Pursuing this PhD has not been an easy journey. I would like to acknowledge all those people who helped me scientifically and emotionally throughout this study. I cannot be able to thank everyone but I can just mention a few. First I give glory and honour to God Almighty for granting me good health, strength and the will power to move on despite the pressure and disappointments associated with the programme. This is also extended to all religious clergy I contacted for their prayers and spiritual support.

I would also like to express my heartfelt gratitude to my supervisors Prof. Jacqueline Broerse and Prof. Anne Nangulu for their incredible dedication and support in this PhD journey. Without you, I could not have handled it on my own. Thank you for believing in me, supporting me and giving me academic freedom to unlock my potentials. You were not only my academic supervisors but also portrait an example of excellence as a researcher, mentor, instructor, and role model to me. It is through you that I came to know that a person can be busy and available at the same time to provide quality supervision. I appreciate and treasure everything you have taught me. The knowledge you have imparted to me will be a great asset throughout my career.

With great appreciation I shall acknowledge the work of the doctorate committee members, Prof.dr. David Ayuku, Prof. dr. Jamine Masinde Masasabi, Prof.dr. Fedde Scheele, Dr. Teun Zuiderent-Jerak, and Prof.dr. Marjolein Zweekhorst. Thank you for accepting the offer to serve as my committee members even at you busy schedule. I also want to thank you for letting my defense be an enjoyable moment, and for your brilliant and critical comments and suggestions that improved my thinking and approach to my topic of study. My very special thanks go to Prof. Jamine Masinde, who encouraged me to pursue this degree and who has mentored me for almost twenty years.

This journey would not have been possible without the financial support from A Sustainable Approach to Livelihood Improvement (ASALI) Project and the entire project team in Kenya and in The Centre for International Cooperation of VU Amsterdam (CES). Dr. Denyse Snelder, Sabina Di Prima, Dia Eek, Colette Geraldts, Noah Chelang'a, Prof. Ambrose Kiprop, Prof. Anne Nangulu, Prof. Mary Mburu, Kimeu Muindi and Harun Kiruki. I particularly owe amazing debt to Dr. Denyse Snelder, the project coordinator of ASALI. I do not know how to extend my gratitude towards you. You were not only my financier, but also, sometimes acted as a mother or a big sister under different circumstances. You always had time for me and always listened to me to understand what I really had issues with. I was full of motivation whenever I left your office for it brought new energy in me and left me with a glimpse of smile on my saddened face after our meetings.

I owe special thanks to my family. I am especially grateful to my mom and dad who supported me emotionally and helped me throughout my life and during this study. I do not know how to thank you enough for providing me with the opportunity to be where I am today. I love you so much. My dad who just passed away in the course of this PhD, thank you for encouraging me in all of my pursuits and inspiring me to follow my dreams. I always knew that you believed in me and wanted the best for me. It is unfortunate that you did not live to witness and celebrate my achievement. I dedicate this work to you as you continue resting in eternal peace. Mum, thank you for filling up the gap of my dad and lending me a shoulder to lean on whenever I am down. Your powerful prayers and words of encouragement always increased my morale to move on with the programme.

I also dedicate this PhD thesis to my dearest husband Josiah Obare and children Stacey, Brandon and Brighton who are the pride and joy of my life. I love you more than anything and I appreciate all your patience and support during mommy's PhD studies. Your prayers, best wishes and moments of separation gave me a reason to work harder and finish this PhD faster so that we can have quality time together. At last I do not know how to begin with saying thank you to my soul mate, my dearest husband and my best friend. I love you for everything, for being so understanding and for putting up with me through the toughest moments of my life. Thank you for always being there for our children whenever I was away for studies. I thank God for enlightening my life with your presence. Sweet heart I love you! You are the best thing that has ever happened to me.

Pursuing a PhD especially in a foreign country can be difficult and sometimes a lonely path. With great appreciation I shall acknowledge all my colleagues at Athena institute and all my friends in the Netherlands. I specially thank Ona Ilozumba, Vibian Angwenyi and Sabina Di Prima. You were more than colleagues. You were like sisters to me and you were always there for me both in the good and worst moments. Your rejuvenating smiles, kind and listening heart, moments of laughter and our gym sessions saved me a lot from the PhD stress. Dr. Eric Mafuta, Dr. George Okello, Dr. Mary Mwangome, Dr. Willice Abuya and Dr. Eric Masese, thank you for the brainstorm sessions, proofreads and for training me on how to analyse and present qualitative data. Thank you Durwin Lynch, Dr. Dirk Essink, Mukesh Hamal and Lana Meiqari for your consistent encouragements and motivations that made me see that anything is possible. Ibukun Abejirinde, Ikenna Desmond, Luchuo Engelbert and Gertrude Nyaaba you were indeed a great and wonderful team to work with. Not forgetting Jane Ruiter and family, your company went beyond books to creating a small Kenya in the Netherlands where we could enjoy Kenyan dishes and adventures together.
