

VU Research Portal

Personal branding

Gorbatov, S.

2019

document version

Publisher's PDF, also known as Version of record

Link to publication in VU Research Portal

citation for published version (APA)

Gorbatov, S. (2019). Personal branding: Self-presentation in contemporary careers. [PhD-Thesis - Research and graduation internal, Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam].

General rights

Copyright and moral rights for the publications made accessible in the public portal are retained by the authors and/or other copyright owners and it is a condition of accessing publications that users recognise and abide by the legal requirements associated with these rights.

- Users may download and print one copy of any publication from the public portal for the purpose of private study or research.
- You may not further distribute the material or use it for any profit-making activity or commercial gain
- You may freely distribute the URL identifying the publication in the public portal

Take down policy

If you believe that this document breaches copyright please contact us providing details, and we will remove access to the work immediately and investigate your claim.

E-mail address:

vuresearchportal.ub@vu.nl

Acknowledgements

A doctorate is an endeavor that no one person can accomplish successfully. What I mean by that is no one person alone. So many people have shaped my academic profile and supported me along the Ph.D. journey. I am immensely grateful to everyone who has taught me, challenged me, supported me, and guided me over these three years.

In particular, I would like to thank my three supervisors, Svetlana Khapova, Evgenia Lysova, and Janneke Oostrom for providing me with direction in this exciting (and chaotic) world of science and shaping much of my thinking. They were able to keep me inspired to develop new and firmly grounded to stay true to the scientific method, at the same time.

I am also grateful to the members of the reading committee. Thank you – Tanya Bondarouk, Paul Jansen, Konstantin Korotov, Judith Semeijn, and Ans de Vos – for the time and effort you have invested in assessing my worthiness to contest the doctoral title.

Monika Hamori and VanDyck Silveira suggested that I should do a Ph.D. in the first place, so really, they are to ‘blame’ for this tumultuous experience. If not for them, I would have never known the elation of seeing a SEM analysis turning up fine.

I thank Liz Dorney-Wilcox and Angela Lane, my work supervisors, for their support in helping me combine studying with the day job. When I first discussed the doctorate idea with Liz, her reaction was, “This is crazy! But if anyone can do it, it’s you”. I am happy to have proven her right.

The VU faculty and staff have made this experience truly memorable. I am particularly grateful to Maria Tims and Judith Plomp for igniting my passion for quantitative methods. And, of course, Niki Konijn is the reason why this program runs like clockwork.

I was not alone in this pursuit. My gratitude goes to the entire Part-Time Ph.D. candidates who pushed me to think deeper and work harder. Our dinners always were just another reason to visit Amsterdam. Ahmed, Alex, Anuschka, Banoyi, Bastiaan, Carlos, Edson, Emilia, Fer, Leatitia, Maarten, Marielle, Martina, Melike, René, Sandra, Saskia, Sophie, Sue, Tobias, Tom, Tuende – it has been such a pleasure!

No meaningful works is possible without the love and encouragement of the people closest to you. It was, in fact, my husband, Oswaldo Hernandez, who bore the brunt of my Ph.D. experience. Vying for my time and attention, often SPSS and AMOS were, unfortunately, winning. My parents and my brother were always there for me when I needed support. My friends never doubted me. My dog Rosca spent so much time with me writing the chapters that she should be getting an academic degree too. Thank you, my dears.